Over a period of four years the Author travelled around Ireland in a four-wheeled wagonette drawn by a pair of Morgan horses. He tells of the trials and tribulations of getting two horses fit and driving them along the boreens and highroads of Ireland, overcoming delays due to Foot and Mouth Disease, traffic, lameness, accidents, constant rain, and broken brakes.

The book not only regales the reader with these tales, but also presents a brief history of Ireland relevant to the understanding of the monuments and ruins encountered; reminders of the country's turbulent past. It concludes with an account of horse - drawn transport of earlier times, the carriages of the Ascendancy and the eccentric Jaunting car and Bianconi coach.

What emerges is a nostalgic snapshot of a land leaving behind the baggage of its past and entering a new world.

Tim Severin, Ireland's greatest contemporary investigative travel writer, in his preface describes the book as, "Quirky, focused, entertaining, --- good old fashioned travel writing".
